Personal Statement

As Founder and Director of MORE Service for Money and Relationships, I offer clinical and educational services to help people understand the psychological aspects of money and how it affects their relationships to others and to themselves.

I am collaborative and eclectic; using techniques drawn for psychoanalytic psychotherapy, cognitive-behavioral therapy, hypnotherapy, family therapy, solution-oriented therapy, and for couple and families, mediation techniques. I am generally non-directive but I do offer guidance or suggestions where appropriate.

I have published several articles about money and psychotherapy, which can be found on my website, along with variety advice and opinion pieces for the general public. I have authored two books: MONEY AND THE PURSUIT OF HAPPINESS In Good Times And Bad (available on Amazon and Kindle) and Money And Psychotherapy: A guide for mental health professionals (NASW Press).

I maintain offices in New York City and Columbia County, New York.
