Personal Statement

Having been a psychotherapist for over 15 years, Danielle Ray holds a firm belief that money and psychology cannot be separated. Money issues are where the symbolic/emotional meets the concrete. Realizing the limitation of solely working from a psychological perspective, she became trained as Financial Counselor at The Financial RecoverySM Institute. Her work is practical, intelligent, and informed by years of study and clinical practice. Though her Financial Counseling is not therapy, you will likely find it transformational.

She is currently in Private Practice in Oakland on the border of Berkeley. She works with individuals and couples, as well as other therapists who want to achieve money mastery and a more successful private practice.
