

The University of Georgia's College of Family and Consumer Sciences offers professional degrees in both Financial Planning (www.fcs.uga.edu/fhce) and Marriage and Family Therapy (www.fcs.uga.edu/hdfs). Guided by experts and leaders in the field, students in these programs have the opportunity to study, practice, and do research within financial therapy. The ASPIRE Clinic provides an especially unique applied learning experience for students, where they deliver financial therapy to clients from the local community. To find out more about the ASPIRE Clinic or the College of FACS, visit www.aspireclinic.org and www.fcs.uga.edu.